Please be Patient Cards have been designed to help carers, & people with dementia, explain their condition in social situations to reduce misunderstanding and confusion for either party.

- Polite and discrete way of informing people that the person you're with has dementia
- Can greatly improve the outcome of social occasions and avoid stresses and awkward moments

Although the understanding around dementia is growing, many carers still encounter social situations where people may not understand their loved one's behaviour; such as why they are having difficulty answering certain questions, or are repeating themselves.

Examples of situations the card may be useful

- If a waiter/waitress isn't as patient as you would like
- If there's any confusion or delays when buying products or making payments
- Can also be used to politely & discreetly explain that you are a caregiver

What if the recipient of the card doesn't know what dementia is?

It's easy to forget that a lot of people simply have no idea what dementia is. So, as suggested by the DAA the reverse of the card provides an opportunity to inform the recipient with a simple, succinct definition of dementia.
