DIY in the shed

The humble shed. For generations, people have retired there to pot plants, repair lawnmowers, and keep busy working on a DIY project.

The DIY movement became popular after WWII as home ownership was rising. Tradesmen were expensive and more people wanted to learn DIY because they now needed to do the work themselves.

How It Works

The thirteen-piece puzzle is the easiest in our range and suitable for people in their mid to late point of their dementia journey.

Each puzzle consists of thirteen pieces that can be assembled within the frame and on a specially printed backing board that is designed to assist and encourage the individual to complete the puzzle themselves.
